Dearest Mom,

It is very possible your ambitions for me are well founded. I won't have exams taken as solid proof until about the middle of January, but you are very liable to become the grandmother of twins about the middle of February if not a few days sooner. -

I haven't told Dick and don't intend to tell him until after the exams. No use him having sleepless nights unnecessarily.

The Dr. got a twinkling gleam in his eye at my examination last week. - He said it feels like two separate bodies and one heart beat is strong and the other weaker as if the shoulder was in the way. Or it might be an echo so don't get your hopes up. - but his continuing quiz lead me to believe it is a certainty.

The questions being are Grandpa Pickard's brothers identical twins?

Are Clarice's boys identical twins?

The remark of the heart beat tells that they are both the same sex. - though which, he wouldn't say.

I'm quite happy about the prospects, but the place will be in quite an uproar from now on out.

Fortunately Randy is a good baby and Doony will sleep through noise. - I'll just have to get Dick the right kind of sleeping pills that won't leave him too groggy for work.

You may tell Aunt Minnie that you can keep up with her now.
Love and kisses
Jean
